

Daniel Law BA (Hons), MMus, DipABRSM

Prize-winning pianist & Masters graduate Daniel studied with pianist Nigel Clayton at the Royal College of Music & conductor Sharon Shoa at the University of East Anglia, where he received distinction for his performance of Shostakovich's 2nd Piano Concerto, given at Norwich Cathedral. Whilst studying piano, accompaniment & composition as an undergraduate at the Colchester Institute Centre for Music & Performing Arts, Daniel performed in masterclasses for Alexander Ardakov, Piers Lane & Victor Sangiorgio, subsequently being awarded both the Canon Jack Award for solo piano & the Colchester Institute Concerto Prize for his performance of John Ireland's Piano Concerto. After graduating, Daniel held the position of resident accompanist at the Colchester Institute for 11 years, accompanying masterclasses & performances by visiting artists, ensembles & educators from leading music conservatoires & London's West-End productions. Alongside professional engagements throughout the East of England & a thriving teaching practice based in Woodbridge (Suffolk), Daniel has collaborated with Britten Pears Arts based at the Snape Maltings concert hall & continues to work closely with members from both Scintillo String Quartet & Kingfisher Ensemble as pianist & duo partner.

A regular recitalist in East Anglia, Daniel has also performed with soloists & ensembles across the UK; a venture in which he has explored interests in the chamber repertoire of 19th Century Romantic & 20th Century British composers. In solo recitals he regularly explores the 'Great' piano composers, performing works by Beethoven, Liszt, Mendelssohn, Schumann & Debussy alongside exploring & promoting the works of early 20th Century British composers John Ireland & Frank Bridge. Previous concerto engagements have included performances with the Southend Symphony & UEA Symphony Orchestras. As a theatre musician in demand, Daniel has performed extensively throughout Suffolk & North Essex but other performances have included intimate cabarets at popular London venues including the Battersea Barge & St. James Studio.
